Angle Wood Blinds

A 70mm shaped abachi Venetian with a distinct angular profile.

Product illustration. The agreed specification and finish determine the supplied product.

Angle introduces a shaped timber face to the window. The 70mm slat creates a different line and shadow from the flat wood range, making it suitable for an interior where the profile itself is part of the design.

The blind can be specified in compatible painted and wood-tone finishes. A pale matt colour may keep the geometry restrained, while a darker or shinier surface makes the changes in angle more evident. A sample is useful for checking that effect under the room's lighting.

- Angular timber profile
- A choice of compatible finishes
- Working tilt and lift control

ANGLE WOOD BLINDS

Planning your specification

Options to discuss

- Painted or wood-tone surfaces
- Compatible ladder details
- Coordinated valance and controls

Practical points

- Profile clearance needs individual assessment
- Finish availability can vary
- Timber is not suitable for direct wetting

How it works

The shaped slats tilt and lift using a compatible Venetian mechanism. A coordinated wood valance covers the headrail. The support, ladder choice and control are checked against the completed blind's weight and the space around the window.

Choosing the finish and details

Provide photographs showing handles and the top of the recess along with approximate measurements. We can then consider whether the profile has enough room to operate and how much glass the raised stack is likely to cover.

Measuring, supply and installation

AdamsBlinds provides measuring as part of a supply and installation project, plus made-to-measure supply-only quotations. Send approximate dimensions, photographs and the number of blinds required to get started. We confirm the specification and final sizes before manufacture. Factory availability, order quantity and any discontinued options are checked for your quotation.
