Bamboo Slat Venetian Blinds

Slim bamboo slats that show the material's distinctive grain within a Venetian blind.

Bamboo Slat combines a familiar Venetian mechanism with the particular grain of bamboo. The slats are available in stained finishes that allow the material's surface pattern to remain part of the appearance. It is a useful choice when you want something more textured than a plain painted blind.

The collection includes 50mm and 70mm formats. Their relatively thin slats create a different profile from thicker wood options, but the finished blind still has weight and needs a suitable mechanism. We assess the dimensions and control before confirming which combination can be made.

- Distinctive bamboo grain

BAMBOO SLAT VENETIAN BLINDS

Planning your specification

Options to discuss

- Compatible stained bamboo finishes
- Ladder cords or supported decorative tapes
- Control suited to the completed blind

Practical points

- Bamboo varies in shade and grain
- Natural movement can be more noticeable than in some timbers
- Do not assume suitability for direct water exposure

How it works

A matching bamboo valance covers the headrail. The slats tilt to direct light, then rise when a clearer opening is needed. Bamboo has natural variations in colour and behaviour, so alignment and small movements should be understood as part of selecting a plant-based material.

Choosing the finish and details

Compare a physical bamboo sample with any existing timber rather than expecting the grain to match. Decorative tape and ladder choices are confirmed for the format. If two or more blinds are intended to line up, include them in the same enquiry so their fitting positions can be considered together.
