Chevron Wood Blinds

Double-pointed 70mm wooden slats that create a strong geometric rhythm.

Product illustration. The agreed specification and finish determine the supplied product.

Chevron uses a double-pointed wooden slat profile to give the blind a clearly geometric character. The shape creates a different surface from a conventional flat Venetian, with the pattern changing as the slats turn.

The construction is based on 70mm abachi wood. It suits a brief where the blind should be a visible design element rather than disappear into the window frame. Compatible painted and wood-tone finishes allow the geometry to be either restrained or more pronounced.

- Distinctive geometric slats
- Natural timber construction
- Adjustable screening

Planning your specification

Options to discuss

- Compatible wood-tone or painted finishes
- Coordinated valance
- Supported ladder and control options

Practical points

- The shaped profile needs extra attention to clearance
- A standard flat-slat stack estimate is unsuitable
- Natural timber variation remains visible

How it works

The slats use a supported Venetian headrail and ladder arrangement. Their shape changes the raised stack and requires adequate room to rotate. We assess the complete window, control position and fitting surface before confirming a configuration.

Choosing the finish and details

Compare the shape from both the front and side. A finish sample establishes colour, but it does not fully represent the repeated profile across the window. If you are considering several adjacent blinds, include them together so their proportions can be planned as one arrangement.
