PRODUCT SELECTION / VERTICAL BLINDS

Paper Pattern Vertical Blinds

Graphic and newspaper-effect surfaces in a vertical blind format.

Product illustration. The agreed specification and finish determine the supplied product.

Paper Pattern Vertical turns the blind into a graphic feature. The long slats display newspaper-inspired or other printed surfaces, creating a different effect from a plain colour or conventional fabric vertical.

Some options use a printed covering, while others use paper over a timber support. The construction is confirmed with the chosen pattern. The artwork is divided into vertical strips, so its rhythm and legibility change as the slats turn.

- A graphic window surface
- Pattern carried through tall slats
- Side-drawing operation

PAPER PATTERN VERTICAL BLINDS

Planning your specification

Options to discuss

- Compatible printed or paper finishes
- Coordinated covered top detail where specified
- Track and draw arrangement

Practical points

- Paper-based surfaces need appropriate care
- Vertical divisions interrupt the design
- Patterns and constructions require confirmation

How it works

The blind draws sideways along a track. A coordinated covered valance may form part of the selected specification. The proposed stack position should leave the opening usable and avoid damage to the decorative surface from nearby furniture or handles.

Choosing the finish and details

Consider the pattern at room scale before choosing it. A small swatch establishes the style but cannot represent the whole composition. We can review the design, dimensions and surrounding finishes together before preparing the quote.

Measuring, supply and installation
