PRODUCT SELECTION / DECORATIVE BLINDS

Textile Covered Venetian Blinds

Fabric-covered slats for a Venetian that relates closely to upholstery and other textiles.

Product illustration. The agreed specification and finish determine the supplied product.

Textile Covered Venetians combine a structured slat with a fabric surface. The range includes several textile appearances, from denim-like cloth to finer and more patterned finishes. This creates a different visual result from fabric hanging freely as a roller or Roman blind.

The support may be wood, aluminium or PVC depending on the textile. Slat width and material composition also vary by option. We keep those construction details with the finish so the quotation describes the actual blind rather than a generic fabric category.

TEXTILE COVERED VENETIAN BLINDS

Planning your specification

Options to discuss

- Compatible denim-like, plain or textured fabrics
- Supported slat width and core material
- Coordinated ladder and trim details

Practical points

- Fabric composition varies between options
- Not every textile is available in every width
- Pattern direction and project requirements need checking

How it works

The covered slats can tilt for daylight control and lift when a clearer opening is needed. Fabric direction, surface texture and the support beneath it all affect the final appearance. Some textiles are restricted to particular widths or require a change in direction on larger blinds.

Choosing the finish and details

Use samples to compare with furnishings, but check the full slat arrangement as well as the cloth alone. If the project has a material or fire-performance requirement, provide it with the enquiry so the specific textile can be assessed.
