PRODUCT SELECTION / INTERIOR FOLDING DOORS

Timber Fold Door

An interior folding door with veneered plywood sections and timber hinges, designed to close an opening without the swing of a conventional door.

Product illustration. The agreed specification and finish determine the supplied product.

The Timber Fold Door uses narrow linked sections that fold together as the opening is cleared. It can be useful where a full-width swinging door would interfere with furniture or circulation.

Its timber veneer gives the door a coordinated joinery appearance. The width of the folded stack and the remaining clear opening are important parts of the design, particularly in a smaller room.

- A folding alternative where swing space is limited
- Coordinated timber veneer appearance
- A clearly specified interior door assembly

TIMBER FOLD DOOR

Planning your specification

Options to discuss

- Compatible timber veneers
- Selected painted finish
- Opening and folding direction
- Coordinated handle and track details

Practical points

- The folded stack reduces the clear opening.
- The veneered sections are not solid timber throughout.
- Any certified performance requirement needs separate confirmation.

A veneered construction with timber details

The listed door uses plywood sections with a timber-veneer finish, rigid timber hinge components and a track-and-carrier arrangement. Timber handles and closing profiles coordinate with the selected face, with a magnetic closure in the standard construction.

The veneer selection includes different timber appearances and a painted option, subject to current availability. We confirm the actual veneer and finish rather than treating the whole door as solid hardwood. Natural grain variation remains visible in genuine veneer.

Measure the usable doorway

The track, folded stack and handle affect the space left for access. We check the overall opening, finished floor level and the soundness of the fixing surface. A door that fits the aperture still needs to provide enough practical clearance for the people and furniture using it.

Tell us if the opening has a special fire, accessibility, security or acoustic requirement. This decorative interior folding construction should not be assumed to satisfy a certified performance requirement without an appropriate confirmed specification. The supply or fitting quotation records the dimensions, finish and included hardware.
