PRODUCT SELECTION / VERTICAL BLINDS

Translucent Vertical Blinds

Light-transmitting vertical slats in several widths, including broad panel-like formats.

Product illustration. The agreed specification and finish determine the supplied product.

Translucent Vertical creates a decorative screen while allowing light through the material. The collection includes different slat widths, from a conventional vertical proportion to much broader pieces that read more like narrow panels.

The range covers 89mm, 127mm and 300mm formats with finish availability varying by width. Some options introduce a more decorative surface. Transparency and diffusion differ between finishes, so this is not one uniform level of privacy.

- Several vertical proportions
- Decorative light transmission
- Adjustable slat angle

TRANSLUCENT VERTICAL BLINDS

Planning your specification

Options to discuss

- Compatible translucent or decorative finishes
- Available narrow or broad formats
- Track and draw arrangement suited to the opening

Practical points

- Not a guaranteed privacy or blackout product
- Broad slats require more rotation clearance
- Exact material and finish must be confirmed

How it works

The slats turn and move along a track, with the broader formats needing particular attention to rotation space and stack depth. The finish should be viewed with light behind it, because that is closer to how it will behave at a window.

Choosing the finish and details

Explain the view you want to screen and the level of privacy needed after dark. We can then assess the width and material rather than choosing on appearance alone. The final quotation confirms the exact translucent product and track arrangement.
