PRODUCT SELECTION / COMPONENTS AND FINISHING DETAILS

Decorative Wood Pelmets

Decorative timber pelmets that finish the top of a blind or window arrangement.

Product illustration. The agreed specification and finish determine the supplied product.

Decorative Wood Pelmets provide a more substantial top treatment than a simple flat valance. Shaped timber profiles can frame the opening and conceal the blind mechanism, helping the window relate to mouldings and other joinery in the room.

The range includes several profiles with painted or stained finishes. Proportion matters as much as the moulding itself: a deep pelmet can dominate a small opening, while a very slight one may look lost above broad glazing.

- A finished architectural top detail
- Painted or stained options
- Coordination with the room's joinery

DECORATIVE WOOD PELMETS

Planning your specification

Options to discuss

- Available moulded profiles
- Compatible paint or stain
- Assessed returns and mounting details

Practical points

- Internal clearance must suit the blind
- An exact match to existing timber is not automatic
- Profile availability and production quantities vary

Specifying the item

The internal depth must allow the blind and its controls to operate. Projection, returns, fixings and access for maintenance are considered before the final size is agreed. The pelmet should be specified with the intended blind rather than added after the mechanism has been positioned.

Choosing the finish and details

Provide the opening width and a photograph of the surrounding joinery. If there is an existing blind, include its projection and headrail details. We can then review compatible profiles, finish and mounting arrangements for a quotation.

Supply and project support

AdamsBlinds can quote for compatible components on a supply-only basis or specify them within a complete supply and installation project. Send dimensions, photographs and the required quantity. We confirm compatibility, factory availability and any production minimum before an order is agreed.
